Cookies

This is the website of Cynthia McFarlane. It is necessary for me to use cookies on my website, therefore if you continue to access my site you must accept that I may place and access certain cookies on your computer. Cookies are small text files placed on your computer in order to enhance your user experience and to make the website function properly, and although I have kept their use to an absolute minimum, some cookies are essential.

Visitors to my website who do not wish to have cookies placed on their computers should set their browser preferences to refuse cookies before accessing my website; although I do not recommend this as you may be unable to access my services. You can also delete cookies placed on your computer the same way through browser preferences.

This Website may place the following cookies on your computer:

Strictly Necessary Cookies: These are cookies that are required for the operation of my website. They include for example, cookies that relate to security of the site or quick loading and distribution of website content.

Functionality Cookies: These cookies are used for example, to recognise you when you return to my website. This enables me to personalise my content for you, greet you by name and remember your preferences (for example, your choice of language or region). Other cookies of this type enable me to recognise and count the number of visitors and to see how visitors move around my website when they are using it. This helps me to improve the way my website works, for example, by ensuring that users are finding what they are looking for easily.

Except for strictly necessary cookies, the majority of the cookies I use will expire from between twenty minutes to two years. Please note, I may also use services provided by Google and in this case I do not have control over the cookies used by Google in providing you with these services. For more information on the cookies used by Google please visit their website.

If you require more information on the cookies I use, please do not hesitate contact me as I aim to operate my website as transparently as possible.
